ABSTRACT :

- The management and protection plan for the environment is formulated to realize sustainable development and anticipate global environmental issues. Therefore, to optimize the sustainability and preservation of the environment as well as the optimal and efficient utilization of natural resources, the implementation of environmental management and protection must be well-planned. In this regard, Regional Regulations that are appropriate or in sync with higher-level regulations are needed to fulfill good principles.

- The legal basis for this Regional Regulation is: The 1945 Constitution, Article 18 paragraph (6); Law No. 16 of 1950; Law No. 32 of 2009; Law No. 23 of 2014; Law No. 6 of 2023; Government Regulation No. 22 of 2021; Surakarta City Regional Regulation No. 10 of 2015.

- This regional regulation governs the Environmental Protection and Management Plan (RPPLH) with systematic and integrated efforts aimed at preserving environmental functions. The RPPLH planning includes written plans that contain potential, environmental issues, and protection and management efforts within a specific timeframe. It aims to support human life, other living creatures, and the balance between them. This regional regulation is formulated for the use of natural resources to improve the quality of life and welfare of the community, taking into account their characteristics and functions as sources and supporters of life, which include ecological, economic, and socio-cultural functions, as well as the needs of future generations.
